Shopping for the perfect gift for your grandchildren means more than simply buying the "it" item of the season. With the right present, you can find a unique way to connect with your loved ones and stay involved in their lives. Even better, a well-chosen gift can help your young grandchildren learn something new or develop a skill – all while having serious fun.

Ready to find that extra-special gift? Keep these five things in mind when holiday shopping. Prepare to see the joy on your grandkids' faces when they unwrap the ultimate present.

Here's your checklist for giving the perfect gift this holiday season.

- 1. Give a gift as unique as they are
For the type of present that won't get lost in the back of a closet, look for something interactive that stands out from the crowded shelves. A hands-on game or creative activity that encourages discovery will be a welcomed change from the same old single-purpose toys. Plus, when the gift sparks different experiences, your grandchildren will reach for it again and again – and think of you each time.
- 2. Give a gift tailored to their interests
Do you have a future scientist on your hands who loves conducting pretend experiments in the kitchen? Or maybe your grandchild is already a pro at coloring and anything art-related. Wherever their specific interests lie, a related gift shows how well you know them and their passions. They'll also be genuinely excited to use your gift. Who knows what it will inspire them to create?
- 3. Give a gift that keeps on giving
With a monthly subscription, the fun doesn't end after the wrapping paper is cleaned up. Your grandchild gets an exciting new package to open each month and a regular reminder that you care about them. It's an easy way to stay involved and up-to-date with their lives, especially if you live far away.
- 4. Give a gift that changes with them
Yes, we wish they'd stay this age forever, but your grandkids are bound to develop new hobbies as they get older. Toys, books, and even beloved stuffed animals eventually become a thing of the past. But here's a way to avoid that – look for a gift that offers a wide variety of projects for each age group and interest. That way, as your grandchild grows, your present grows with them by providing exciting, brand-new activities.

- 5. Give a gift designed for learning
It's never too early to share the joy of learning with your entire family. Look for a gift that encourages creativity and curiosity in science, technology, engineering, art, or math without making it seem like a chore. The possibilities are endless, from building their own stomp rocket to learning food science by making fluffy pancakes. You might even learn a thing or two yourself.

Shopping for your grandchildren doesn't have to be a guessing game. KiwiCo delivers seriously fun and interactive gifts that your grandchildren are guaranteed to love. With these tips and KiwiCo's science and art projects, finding the perfect holiday gift for your grandchildren is a "wrap."
